

Service Summary

The Association has some emphasis on 'online' services. We make extensive use of the internet and telecommunications capability. With good online services, where you happen to be matters less and less. The website has direct access to our main services. Visit the Member Services link for more details - www.mea.org.nz/services.aspx.

MEAssist

Electronic Networking – members can ask for information and help from other members via this process. An email is re-sent to all members without identifying who asked for assistance.

“most services are available remotely”

Once the contacts are available, the member requesting the information can then choose who to contact.

Human Resources Advisory Services

A full range of human resources support including our Human Resources Manual.

Associate Members

A comprehensive range of professional support.

Events and Training

We have a number of events and training opportunities on the calendar, these are intended to present different types of content in an accessible way. Generally delivered by our Associate Members or staff they are a quick way to stay up to date and meet people with similar issues.

“if you can't make a meeting we will put you in contact with the presenter”

Standards

The development of standards is important to New Zealand, ensuring manufacturers and exporters have a voice in the standards harmonisation and approval process is an important issue underpinning market access.

Information

There is a good deal of Information on the Association web site – www.mea.org.nz – the site has been structured to make things easy to find. Look for Media Releases, Viewpoints (slightly longer comments) and Outlook (background discussion documents) articles on policy issues. Some information is only available on request.

“see our web site for information and comment”

We have developed a comprehensive Human Resources Manual and an extensive Export Manual written by expert practitioners. These manuals are available on request in hard and soft copy. Soft copies can be customised by members for their own branded use.

Updates to the web site will cover off necessary changes and there are a number of links to tested information sources.
